

AUTHOR PROFILE: ANNI SENNOV

Translation Broadens the Mind

Danish author Anni Sennov is a clairvoyant advisor, international lecturer and has published more than 20 books about energy and consciousness as well as relationships and New Time children, several of which have been translated from Danish into a number of languages (English, Norwegian, Swedish, Finnish, Estonian, Russian, Czech, French).

You specialise in writing on areas such as energy and consciousness, self-development, relationships and New Time children, where do you get your inspiration?

Anni: “When writing I primarily make use of my clairvoyant ability which has followed me on a daily basis since I got seriously ill with very severe eczema back in the late 1980’s.

I am very spontaneous and intuitive when writing and I get my inspiration from within while at the same time sensing and being inspired by what’s going on in the energies in my surroundings. I like to share my spiritual knowledge with others and inspire people to make a positive difference in their lives for the benefit of both themselves and others.

So when raising my two children I was inspired to write about Indigo and Crystal children and when meeting my husband Carsten who is my spirit mate, it felt natural for both of us to write about spirit duality, which in fact was the first book we wrote together. The same goes for all the twenty books I have written so far.”

“I have to write to empty my mind”

Some of your books have been co-written with your husband, how does this process differ from writing on your own?

A: “When I write my own books all information literally flows out of my hands. It often feels like I have to write to empty my mind, so when I have emptied my mind, so to speak, it’s time for doing other things and then I will continue my writing the very next day or night until I have finished the whole book and I have nothing more to write about on the given subject. This is normally an intense process which lasts for 3-4 months.

When co-writing with my husband it is either him or me starting to write and then the other part takes over and add whatever they feel for in the text and sometimes the text is totally rewritten when we get it back.

This process continues for a couple of rounds until we are both satisfied with the result.

It could also be my husband giving me keywords or questions that he wants me to write about as if he was a client consulting me and then I start writing in the same way as when writing a book on my own.”

What’s changed over your extensive writing career, have you noticed any particular trends?

“I like to share my spiritual knowledge with others and inspire people to make a positive difference in their lives”

A: “What has been most significant for me during the recent years of my writing career is that today things change so fast that the subjects I write about today might be outdated within a year or so and then there is in fact no need for writing about them. Instead, I give lectures on the subjects for as long as the subjects are relevant to my audience. Therefore, I do no longer write books about all subjects that come into my mind. I only write books about themes that I know will be relevant for many years to come.”

You’ve written over twenty books in ten languages so far, can you explain a little about how the translation process worked for you?

A: “We have got a lot of experience of what works and what does not work in our areas of writing and from this we have made a guidance and process which we follow strictly:
1) We ourselves only enter a new country if we have a native speaking business partner, who understands about energy and consciousness. This person then becomes our proofreader and our quality assurance in the language that we don’t speak ourselves.

2) We then offer the translating partner role on ProZ.com and shortlist 2-3 people based upon experience, reference, price, availability and our energy assessment.
3) We then pay for a test translation of a preselected relevant text.
4) We evaluate and select the future translation partner for that specific language and we start the translation of websites, selected material and books.”

What are you currently working on?
A: “Currently I am working on a totally new project called “Transformational webinars” starting in August 2014, where I will guide the participants on how to get to the next consciousness level. In these sacred group webinars I help transform the group energy, hand over spiritual knowledge which is not found in any of my books as well as give individual transformational guidance.

My next book project deals with the Golden energy, the Golden Age and the Golden children. It will be published in 2015 in English and Swedish initially.”

Professor Cedric Watts discusses 25 puzzles presented by the works of Shakespeare. For instance: Should we save Innogen in Much Ado? 'Dauphin' or 'Dolphin' in Henry V? What is the plot of the lost Love's Labour's Won? The discussions reveal the linkage of minor and major concerns.

- Watts' previous critical books include: William Shakespeare: Measure for Measure (Penguin, 1986); Hamlet (Harvester, 1988); Romeo and Juliet (Harvester, 1991); and Henry V: War Criminal? (with J. Sutherland; Oxford, 2000)
- Shakespeare Puzzles should appeal to anyone interested in Shakespeare, whether scholars, students, teachers or theatregoers
- Written in a clear, direct style, while often dealing with sophisticated matters of scholarship and analysis
- The author is currently editor of the Wordsworth Classics' Shakespeare Series
